John Reeves— Poet-Producer

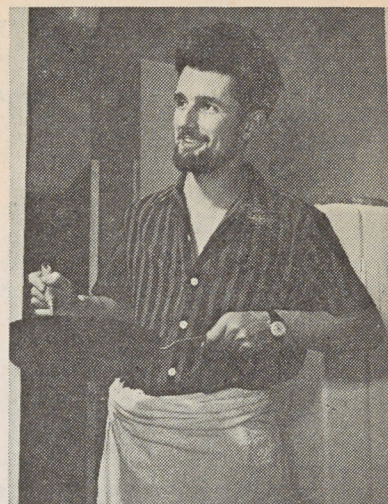

WHEN you ask a wide variety of people about a rising young artist, you expect to hear at least one snide remark, which you can usually dismiss as sour grapes or indigestion. When you hear nothing but accolades you grow suspicious. You ask more people. When they confirm what the others said, you hot-foot it around to see the subject of all this detective work, and, in the case of John Reeves, you find that he is extraordinary. Unconventional, perhaps, but not aggressively so — if you don't mind an Apostle's beard and a shirt unbuttoned to the waist—and also charming, and brilliant enough to win for the CBC the coveted Italia prize with his verse-drama A Beach of Strangers, which he wrote and produced for CBC Wednesday Night last spring.

"John Reeves is one of the great producers in the drama field," says R. S. James, assistant supervisor of CBC radio drama. "This man really has something, and I feel he'll become one of the outstanding Canadian writers whose work will be recognized all over North America and Europe. He's developed amazingly in the last few years and is a tremendous credit not only to the CBC but to Canada as a whole."

In his sunny bachelor apartment across the street from the CBC's main Toronto studios Reeves slung his legs over the arm of his chair, tinkled the ice in a long drink and settled down with an amused look to help—or hinder—this reporter's aim to find out more about the man behind the beard. His appearance is misleading. Bearded Eros? Beatnik? Shy Ariel? Seraph? Genius? He could be any or all. Something of the rake lurks behind his wicked grin when he talks about the women in his life. Beatnik? Not according to Scots engineer Tom Prentice who has worked with him for three or four years on many shows, including A Beach of Strangers. Says Prentice: "John likes informality because he's a man of free feeling, free thinking and free movements. He doesn't dress that way to impress people—they're impressed enough by the mental skill of the man, not his skeleton form showing through his shirt. And as for work he's no Beatnik slouch. He doesn't like loiterers—works like mad to a deadline and expects his technical operators to know their business. He has a sharp way of telling off guys who don't. I'm always arguing with him about various sound techniques. He'll make snap judgments, and he's dead right every time. He's a lot of fun—has a great sense of humor — but he's a real professional. I've nothing but praise for him." Prentice says he has heard A Beach of Strangers at least 20 times, "and it's so very human that I get something new out of it every time. It's like modern Charles Dickens—personalities of the street are moulded into unforgettable characterizations."

Reeves covers a hint of shyness with a crisp manner. This, coupled with his slight physique, a perpetually alert air, and a sometimes disconcertingly candid gaze give him the appearance of an intelligent gazelle. He moves as quickly and delicately as the boxer he once was. Now his athletics are limited to what he calls "armchair boxing." He likes to watch the fights on other people's TV sets—stubbornly refuses to own one himself—and reads every track report he can get. Seraph? He would snort at that. But Diana Maddox—whom he considers one of the best actresses he has ever directed—says "He's good in the true sense of the word. He hasn't a mean or temperamental bone in his body. He has no axe to grind and he's not a pusher. My husband and I have always felt great things are in store for John. He should write as much as he can . . . I know it's exhausting on top of his production job, but we keep saying 'work on! work on!' As a director he doesn't waste people's time, has an extremely high standard but makes it easy for his performers to give their best. It's wonderful to find that sort of person rewarded with the Italia Prize."

Reeves insists that just because he may write interesting things it does not mean his own story is equally enthralling. He quotes W. H. Auden's poem at the grave of Henry James: All will be judged. Master of nuance and scruple, pray for me and for all writers living or dead; because there are many whose works are in better taste than their lives, because there is no end to the vanity of their calling: make intercession for the treason of all clerks.

After serving in various western Canadian parishes, Newfoundland-born George Reeves, an Anglo-Catholic clergyman, and his English wife, a relative of the poet (Please turn to page 23)

Saturday Mobiles

A preview of some TV specials

THROUGHOUT Ontario about eight pheasant farms are breeding this famous game bird for the hunting season. On Saturday, October 10, CBC will send a mobile television truck to one of these farms at Zephyr, near Mt. Albert, Ontario. Thom Benson, Supervisor of outside broadcasts for the Ontario region, will conduct viewers round the farm.

"We'll tour the farm and show various aspects of gamebird conservation and hunting," says Benson. "We'll show something of the care of pheasants, the use and training of dogs, something about guns, and perhaps a discussion on hunting by some well known sports-writers. And of course, we'll show something of an actual hunt and how hunters set about it."

World Music Festivals

From the Bayreuth Wagnerian Festival featuring the Festival orchestra conducted by Wolfgang Sawallitsch: Excerpts of Wagner's opera "The Flying Dutchman," with George London in the title role.
CBW-9:35 pm CBK-8:30 pm CBX-8:30 pm

The true pheasant, together with partridge and quail, comprise the family Phasianidae. Some members of the family are particularly beautiful: the striking green pheasant of Japan, for instance, and the crested short-tailed bird from India, China and Tibet whose plumage is brightly iridescent with blue, green, purple and shining gold. Other members of the same family are not so beautiful: for instance, the barnyard fowl. The more than 180 kinds in the general family have in common naked feet and toes. The true pheasant is distinguished by his brilliant plumage and graduated long tail of 18 feathers.

The Common Pheasant is a native of the old world, from the Black Sea through to the Orient. Alexander the Great is supposed to have had the birds cultivated to supply his army; certainly the Greeks and Romans knew the bird and the Romans probably introduced it to Great Britain.

Individual sportsmen probably introduced the pheasant to Canada before 1895, but certainly a successful liberation was made in 1895. As the bird nests on the ground, the eggs are susceptible to damage from human activities such as the use of agricultural instruments as well as natural predators like hawks and foxes. Hence the need for pheasant farms.

This program is one of a number of mobiles from across Canada to be seen at this time on Saturdays on CBC-TV during the winter months. Following is a tentative list of dates and programs:

October 24: Vancouver mobile trucks visit the farmers market at New Westminster.

November 7: National Survival, a program on Civil Defence, from Ottawa.

November 14: A visit to the Royal Winter Fair at the C.N.E. grounds, Toronto, on the opening day to see an RCMP musical ride. Prior to the ride, which takes almost 20 minutes, viewers will go behind the scenes to meet some of the riders and to see their horses.

Later programs will include one from Vancouver about a buffalo hunt.

International Celebrities On CBC Recital Series

An unusual feature of the Distinguished Artists series which returned to CBC radio October 6 is three guitar recitals by international celebrities. The first of these was the opening broadcast featuring the brilliant young English artist JULIAN BREAM who played work by Mozart, Bach and Villa-Lobos for the guitar and also lute pieces by early English composers. An even more unusual recital will be given on November 10 by the world famous duo guitarists IDA PRESTI and ALEXANDRE LAGOYA from France. During the past few years they have toured Europe, North Africa, Australia and Indonesia, and made many recordings. Their program will include a work specially written for them by Daniel Lesur. REY DE LA TORRE, to be heard on December 29, is a guitarist well known to Canadians through both public appearances and recordings. Born in Cuba, he was a child prodigy and studied in Spain before earning an international reputation.

Two outstanding Canadian violinists will be heard: BETTY JEAN HAGEN from Toronto on October 13, and FRANCIS CHAPLIN from Halifax on November 24.

The series also included three piano recitals. On October 27 KENDALL TAYLOR from England will conclude his program with a sonata by the Saskatoon composer Murray Adaskin. Mr. Taylor is well known in Europe as a recitalist and concerto soloist. MARIO BERNARDI, one of Canada's most brilliant pianists, has chosen Liszt's Sonata in B Minor for his recital on December 1, and on the 15th one of the greatest American pianists of today, LEON FLEISHER, will give the Canadian premiere of a sonata by a fellow American, Leon Kirchner. In 1952, at 24 years of age, Mr. Fleisher won the most coveted piano competition in the world—the Queen Elizabeth Competition of Belgium. Since that time he has played at such festivals as Salzburg and Berlin, made extensive international tours and, in addition, become a prominent recording artist. The great conductor Pierre Monteux has described Fleisher as "the pianistic find of the century."

Other instrumentalists performing in the Distinguished Artists series are Vancouver 'cellist ERNST FRIEDLANDER on November 17 and the remarkable flutist JEAN-PIERRE RAMPAL on December 8. Mr. Rampal will be accompanied by the French pianist and harpsichordist Robert Veyron LaCroix.

JEAN-PIERRE RAMPAL
French flutist (Dec. 8).

Together they will give the North American premiere of a work specially written for them by the French composer Jolivet. Both Jean-Pierre Rampal and Robert Veyron LaCroix are internationally renowned and have made recordings for three companies.

In addition to instrumentalists, three fine singers have been included in the series. On October 20 Canadian baritone NORMAN FARROW, who has been widely acclaimed in the United States, will sing an unusual recital which includes works by composers from Grandi to Purcell. The Swedish contralto KIRSTEN MEYER will broadcast a recital from Vancouver on November 3. Miss Meyer made her North American debut at the Vancouver International Festival earlier this year. In Europe she has sung in the opera houses of Stockholm, Vienna, Venice and Hamburg. On December 22 the Canadian baritone DONALD BELL will give a recital from Montreal. At 26 years of age Mr. Bell has been hailed by critics in England, Europe and Canada as one of the greatest singers of our time. This year he sang in 26 performances at the Wagner Festival at Bayreuth and at the Lucerne Festival. During his next tour of North America Mr. Bell will sing in every major city in Canada and appear with the Montreal Symphony under Thomas Schippers and the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Ormandy.

LEON FLEISHER
American pianist (Dec. 15).

REY DE LA TORRE
Cuban guitarist (Dec. 29).

The drama stars Jeremy Wilkin as Jim Tanner, a backward, 20-year-old youth who plays with tin soldiers. He is sentenced to be hanged as a murder accessory and the play reveals the effect of the death-cell confinement on him and those close to him. "Murder Story" was produced by Leo Orenstein for the CBC in November, 1954. It was considered one of the most moving television plays ever shown and for this reason it is being given a new production by Orenstein. Other leading actors in the cast will include Eric Christmas, Elizabeth Cole, Barry Morse, Barbara Alleyn, Donald Ewer, Norman Ettlinger, Gillie Fenwick, Norman Welsh, Leslie Yeo and Mary Savidge.

For Women—

Capital Fashions

JEAN MILLER and MARGARET NESS interview some of the world's leading fashion designers daily this week on "Open House"

IF you're a woman and fashion shows leave you feeling like a sack of potatoes and about as svelte as leftover blancmange, don't blame it all on your slim bank account, rich desserts or "tired blood." You'd like to be as chic as Marlene Dietrich? Heed this advice from famous New York hat designer Walter Florell, who lists Miss Dietrich as one of his favourite customers: The next time you get all gussied up for some special event, he suggests, stand in front of a full-length mirror, give yourself a long candid look, and then take off at least one accessory or piece of jewelry; paring down the busy look of your costume is the first step on the road to elegance. Mr. Florell's tip is only one of many offered by some of the world's leading fashion designers in a special feature each day this week on CBC-TV's Open House.

When Europe's main fashion houses had their fall and winter showings not long ago, Jean Miller, Open House fashion authority, was there and interviewed four of the most interesting couturiers on newsreel film. Margaret Ness, Toronto fashion reporter, did the same in New York. Their conversations will be presented this week, under the title of Capital Fashions.

On Monday Miss Miller talks to Jacques Heim, president of the association of French designers, Couture Parisienne. You'll meet him in his elegant salon, and hear him tell how the fashion showings are arranged, how France became the centre of fashion and stayed that way. A century or two ago, he said, designers there dressed dolls in haute couture and sent them all over the world as a guide to modistes far from centres of fashion. (Please turn to page 15)

The Town Above

A new Monday night dramatic series by ROGER LEMELIN, creator of "The Plouffe Family"

Roger Lemelin

TWO favourite characters from The Plouffe Family return to CBC-TV this season in The Town Above, a new 35-week series by Roger Lemelin, creator of the Plouffes.

With the exception of these characters—Uncle Gedeon (played by Doris Lussier) and Onesime, the bus driver (played by Roland Bedard)—The Town Above will have little in common with The Plouffe Family.

Mr. Lemelin has created a new family in a new setting—the upper middle class section of Quebec City. The Chevalier family is better off than the Plouffes, and the problems of keeping up with the Joneses (or in this case the Duponts and the Durands) will be a predominating theme in the series. Another recurring theme will be the growing differences between the parents and the rebellious younger generation.

Quebec City is divided into Upper and Lower Towns by a hill, but the difference in the levels is more than topographical. Fred Chevalier, an accountant, struggled up the hill in the years immediately following the second world war, when he was making a good salary, and bought a house in Silvery, one of Quebec City's exclusive suburban developments. Now, with three children in their late teens and a baby on the way, Fred finds he is living beyond his means on a salary which is no longer increasing.

the Edmonton Eskimos and the Winnipeg Blue Bombers. Commentators will be CBC sportscasters Jack Wells and Bob Moir. (For players names and numbers see page 2).

Fred, played by Roland Chenail, keeps his actual salary a secret from the family, plans to send his elder son, Denis (played by Louis Turenne—known to Winnipeg and St. Boniface theatre-goers as Louis Cusson) to medical school. Denis, a studious type of boy, is the only member of the family aware of his father's financial position.

Fred's wife (played by Denise Pelletier—the Plouffe's Cecile Plouffe) and daughter Diane (played by Catherine Begin) coax Fred for new and expensive status symbols that will enhance their standing in the community.

Fred's younger son, Pierre (played by Yvon Thiboutot), is a member of a street gang on which the police are keeping a watchful eye.

Other characters to be introduced include relatives of the Chevaliers who are still living in the Lower Town, and "Sanny," proprietress of a famous coffee shop on La Rue St. Pierre, the financial street of Quebec City. Sanny will be played by Clairette, an actress from Marseilles who has recently settled in Montreal.

Lemelin, who is familiar with both milieus of Quebec City (he spent his boyhood in the Lower Town, and wrote his best-seller, The Town Above in that setting) plans to make greater use of filmed exteriors in the new series. Producer Jean Dumas believes that this photographic introduction to historic Quebec will provide added interest for English viewers of the series.

The Town Above will be seen on both French and English television networks, as was The Plouffe Family. The scripts will be translated by Richard Daignault, and Norma Springford will be dramatic coach for the English version.

INGRID BERGMAN

Starts Tuesday

Face-to-Face With CBWT's "Eye-To-Eye"

Eye-To-Eye, a new public affairs television program, makes its debut on CBWT October 20. The new program, three-quarters of an hour in length, will be seen each Tuesday, 10:15 to 11:00 p.m.

The basic aim of the new program will be to delve into questions, issues and problems of public concern and controversy in the CBWT area. The program will tackle current issues through the use of interviews, film stories, and panel discussions and on occasion will originate from locations outside the CBWT studios to make on-the-spot enquiries into important and significant events and developments in Manitoba. The opening program October 20 will provide viewers with a three-way sampling of the kind of production they can expect — several interviews, a film story, and a discussion.

The first program, coming just a week before the civic election in Winnipeg, will feature a discussion on the ills of city government and the apathy of voters. Archie Micay, chairman of the Civic Election Committee, will be one of the panelists. The other — Walter Young, political scientist at the University of Manitoba, and author of a recent article in Maclean's magazine advocating party politics in civic elections. Mr. Young will be seen frequently on Eye-To-Eye as chairman of discussions, but on the first program he will take the role of a participant. Also on the first program: a film round-up of the kind of stories viewers can expect to see given the full treatment in later weeks.

TV and film producer Felix Lazarus has enlisted Warner Troyer, City Hall reporter for the Winnipeg Free Press, to assist in searching out questions and issues for enquiry on Eye-To-Eye, and Mr. Lazarus will work with Ken Black of the CBC Public Affairs Department in developing program material. Announcer Harvey Dawes will introduce each subject.

"We hope to provide fair, balanced comment on issues of local concern," said Mr. Lazarus, "but we won't back away from controversy. We hope to put enough bite in our programs to provide stimulating perhaps even provocative entertainment for the viewers."

All-Star Jazz Show Friday

The third Canadian All-Star Jazz Show, this Friday on CBC-TV, will trace the development of jazz through the three basic instruments—the drums which beat out the intricate basic African rhythms of mid-19th century New Orleans, the trumpets of the New Orleans marching bands which added an overlay of borrowed European melodies, and the piano which added the final sophistication to jazz when it came up the Mississippi to the northern cities.

Taking part will be the Peter Appleyard Quartet, the Jimmy Coxson Quartet, Mike White and his Imperial Jazz Band, Eddie Karam, and vocalist Phyllis Marshall. Fred Davis will again be host.

Each member on the program will illustrate a phase in the development of jazz.

Peter Appleyard will forsake his favoured vibes to play the tympani (instruments seldom used in jazz) with four drummers in an extended number reminiscent of the New Orleans jam sessions called "bamboulas."

Wednesday Night on Radio

A Gathering of Days

A verse drama about childhood by ALFRED W. PURDY, produced by JOHN REEVES

There was a farm. Grass greener than Mrs. Bellweather's lime cake icing. Cows like hip-sprung dowagers. Roman-nosed horses with haughty stare. Pigs preoccupied with adding marked poundage. Chickens busy pecking at buffet suppers. And Rex, the elderly shepherd dog, surveying his green kingdom like a fur-coated feudal baron.

REMEMBER? Seven giant steps into the past, four short steps sideways, and one dwarf step into your mind and you are there, in the misty, stretching days of your childhood, when you "saw wonders and did not marvel, went to school and learned little"—and were free.

Remember the first sleigh bells on the first day of snow, when "small boys stirred under patchwork quilts, scrubbed frost from windows and peered into the musical streets"? Or scary days out on the river in the first taunt of spring, with "Proteus growling beneath the ice like a chained monster, and cracking enormous knuckles at schools of sleeping fish"? Remember your grimy alley-bag with its winking tiger-eyes and smokeys; airplane hopscotch, diagrams in blood, and Jimmy Loves Marion carved on a wooden wall? You could stand and watch a bug climb a sandhill, with night a million years away, and morning an aeon past." And the sounds—"frogs in Black Pond tuning fiddles tentatively," the plop of a mussy turtle peering at the ripening world above, the screech of a sewing machine, and the tantalizing cries of "Run sheep, run!" from the vacant lot on the evening air when you are sick-a-bed.

And the people. The boasting kid down the street: "See this scar? An Iroquois wounded me there. I never told anybody at all till now." James McKinnon, memorial craftsman, with his Scots oaths that turned the air a lovely magenta. Steinbeck the butcher, hands on bloody apron. Mrs. Moriarity, "slender colleen grown stout, soft tongue sharp, and slim fingers blunt as wooden pegs." Mr. Goldfinch, the hired man—"he's got a big silver watch and says hell's bells and buckwheat when he's mad." Grandfather, a lovable old gassy pirate with a yellow moustache. Crazy Joe, mouth twitching as he slams the door of his tin shack against the jeers of thoughtless boys. Mr. Dwiggins, the school principal—"Everything old and established is right and good, everything new abhorrent"—squinting down at his mediterranean belly, unconscious of the spit-ball heading for his fifth waistcoat button. And Jack Corson, your best friend for no known reason. "I gotta cut on my leg. Wanta see?" "I got a worsen'n that. It's got a scab."

Timeless days, that can never happen again. Canadian poet Alfred W. Purdy invites you to journey back through them in A Gathering of Days, a verse drama which will be presented on CBC Wednesday Night this week. Producer John Reeves describes it as "commentary on childhood from the adult mind and memory, with a twofold purpose: to capture through nostalgia what was important in the poet's childhood, and through facing up to his own memories to see what is important in his life because of it." Several volumes of Purdy's poetry have been published—Pressed on Sand, The Enchanted Echo, and The Crafts So Longe To Learn, which came out this year. He is convinced that Canadian poetry has a national identity, and is impatient with the idea that it is nothing but a pale colonial offshoot. A Gathering of Days confirms his theory, as will be heard on Wednesday night.

U.N. May Use CBC Technique

A CBC radio program may serve as a model for a television history of the United Nations, now in the planning stage in New York.

Gerald Kean, chief of special projects for United Nations radio and television, has asked CBC radio for a transcription of Hollywood '59 a history of films which was conceived by Harry J. Boyle and Broadcast August 14 on the Trans-Canada network.

Kean said he wants his television producers to examine the technique used by Gerald Pratley and Tony Thomas in tracing the history of films through interviews with Hollywood personalities. He became interested in Hollywood '59 when he read a review of the program in the Sept. 23 Variety magazine.

portion Len Weinstein, CBC producer, will show how a producer controls a television show.

The Deputy

Western starring Henry Fonda as Simon Fry, chief marshal of the Arizona territory, and Alan Case as his deputy. This week — "Proof of Guilt." Deputy Clay McCord investigates the case of the gold smelter robbery in which two guards were killed. As a result, an innocent man finds himself in a precarious position.

Talent Caravan

This week the program originates in Regina. Host is George Murray and the orchestra is under the direction of Ricky Hyslop.

Close-Up

Douglas Leiterman interviews Canadian-born British newspaper publisher Lord Beaverbrook. The interview was filmed in the Lord Beaverbrook Art Gallery at Fredericton, New Brunswick, a few days before the gallery opened to the public. Beaverbrook, born Max Aitken, discusses his paintings, his newspapers, and the energy and ambition which drove him to acquire a fortune. The report will be produced by Pat Watson.

The Man From Blackhawk

This week — "New Samaria Story." Sam Logan (Robert Rockwell) travels to New Samaria in search of the beneficiary of an insurance policy and rides into the middle of violence and a plan to cheat a boy of his rightful inheritance.

CAPITAL FASHIONS

fashion. So highly did the British esteem the elegance of their ladies that there was an understanding between the Courts of St. James and Versailles that in time of war the dolls would have a special diplomatic passport, and there would be no firing on the ships as they sailed on to Britain! M. Heim displays some of his own models—a fluid sheath, a leopard coat and hat, and a brown lace ensemble in the new longer length for late daytime wear.

On Tuesday and Wednesday you'll meet three Roman designers . . . Eleanor Garnett and the Fontana Sisters, Zoe and Nicolle. Miss Miller will be seen talking to them in their salons. Eleanor Garnett, regal and calm with her hair in braids around her head, tells how she became a couturiere, and will probably surprise you with her statement that although she designs for an international market, she doesn't keep any particular climate or way of life in mind when sketching. "Smart women are the same the world over," she says. She exhibits several of her own creations—a tweed costume in parma violet with a feminine fitted jacket and a skirt with fullness; an "at home" outfit that will make your eyes pop (a black chiffon skirt over draped lamé pants); and a beautiful ivory satin ball gown with a large collar. The charming Fontana Sisters are carrying on the business begun by their mother 52 years ago. Although North Americans know their cocktail and evening dresses best, they also design for day wear. They'll show some of their new collection, including a long velvet tunic coat and skirt, tailored but soft. Because they feel accessories are a vitally important part of a costume, a branch of their firm is making beautiful, unusual shoes and hats. They exhibit a cocktail shoe with a winged vamp, another with a quite mad heel, made for Gina Lolabrigida, and trimmed with jet lace. And they show some original printed dress material

GEORGE SWINTON

The teacher on CBC Winnipeg's weekly network program, "Art in Action," claims the distinction, possibly unique, of having held art education positions simultaneously in four American institutions—Smith College in Newhampton, Mass.; the University of Massachusetts; Hillyer College in Hartford, Conn.; and the Walter Vincent Smith Museum at Springfield, Mass.

Prof. Swinton came to the notice of these and other schools through his experiments with new techniques in art education which he conducted while living in Saskatoon after the second world war.

For the past five years Mr. Swinton has taught at the University of Manitoba School of Art. At present he is on leave of absence from the University of Manitoba, devoting a year to creative work under a Canada Council grant. Trained in Vienna, Mr. Swinton lived in Montreal and New York before coming to the Canadian west.

"Art in Action" is seen Wednesday afternoons on the full CBC-TV network. The program is presented "live" in Winnipeg, and on film to the network one week later.

On Thursday Margaret Ness talks to suave Oleg Cassini and Walter Florell in New York. Cassini tells why he gave up law for designing, and came to this continent, describes his Hollywood and army careers, and gives his opinion about the new mannish look in feminine clothes. He discusses his fashion philosophy, reminding women not to surrender to fads. "If you do you may be in fashion but not a fashionable woman." Florell offers this as a yardstick for a well-dressed woman: When you get stared at, you're wrong. He cites the Maguire sisters as examples of good fashion sense. On Friday viewers will hear what Canada is contributing to fashion, when couturier Mario DiNardo of Montreal is interviewed by Anna Cameron and displays some of his new styles.

"Everyone was most charming and co-operative on the Continent," Miss Miller tells us, "and went to a great deal of trouble for me at a very busy time. The designers were all, of course, extremely clever and cosmopolitan, but what made things easier was the fact that we all spoke the same language—the language of fashion."

SATURDAY TV NOTES

"Rusty" Ryan (John Wayne). This pair, and their crews, have long believed that the tiny, high-powered craft, equipped with guns and torpedo tubes, could slip into Jap-infested harbours under cover of darkness, loose their torpedoes, and streak out with a maximum of safety. They are given an opportunity to prove this theory when the Philippines are blockaded after the Pearl Harbour attack.

N.H.L. Hockey

This week—Danny Galivan describes the Montreal Canadians-Boston Bruins contest direct from the Montreal Forum. Frank Selke, Jr., provides the colour.

Staccato

Starring John Cassavetes as a nightclub pianist who doubles as a private detective.

Juliette

Twenty minutes of music and song with Canada's own Juliette, the Romeos and Bobby Gimby and his orchestra.

ALL-STAR JAZZ

Phyllis Marshall and Eddie Karam have worked out an original blues song based on a street chant written in the traditional 12-bar blues phrasing.

Brass was added to jazz by way of the many marching bands of New Orleans. Bandsmen met on street corners to play, and were sometimes hired to travel about the city on wagons. Mike White and his Imperial Jazz Band will board such a wagon to demonstrate.

When jazz moved north, from New Orleans to Chicago, the piano was added to the basic instrumentation. Pianist Jimmy Coxson will improvise on three keyboards—piano, harpsichord, and Hammond organ.

Other items on the show: a "spasm" band—one made up of home-made instruments (washboard, tea chest, cigar box guitar, etc.), and (if it can be found in time) a piano roll of the first jazz music published for piano—the Maple Leaf Rag published by Scott Jopson in St. Louis, Mo., in 1899.

Fan's Complaint

• In general I am an ardent fan of CBC and frequently I become quite violent in the presence of those who advocate more and more American TV programs for Canadian viewers. However, I have two specific beefs about particularly annoying characteristics of the CBC television and radio presentations: First—could you please tell me whether there is any rational reason why commercials must come on at a volume much higher than the programs? Second—it does get very annoying to have the sequence and mood of a good movie constantly interrupted by a bunch of banal blurbs about products in which I have little or no interest. Would it not be possible to limit the number of times during a program that the commercials are presented?—J. Greenway, Winnipeg.

Our engineers tell us that the recording techniques (type and position of microphone, etc.) used by sponsors sometimes make a commercial sound louder than the program in spite of the fact that both measure the same on the operator's volume metres. The operator can minimize this psycho-acoustic phenomenon by turning down the level of the commercial and turning up the level of the program material, but since this can only be done to a limited degree if a good signal is to be maintained it is sometimes impossible to overcome this problem completely. Regarding the second question: there are rules "limiting the number of times during a program that the commercials are presented." The Board of Broadcast Governors has ruled that "... no station shall broadcast paid, spot, or flash advertisements that exceed five in number or four minutes in total time during a 15-minute period..." CBWT has limited itself to a maximum total of 10 one-minute commercials during a 90-minute feature film, which is well within the limits imposed by the BBG. Further, in order to prevent breaking the contin-

CONNOISSEURS of singing among us, and their name is legend, will have an opportunity to compare the qualities and skills of two well-known practitioners, in the persons of Norman Farrow, who will be heard in the Distinguished Artists concert on Tuesday evening, and basso Jan Rubes, who is to appear in CBC Concert Hall on Thursday afternoon.

The juxtaposition of these two types of voice fails to point up a minor curiosity of musical development — the tendency of the higher and deeper voices to diminish in the frequency of their occurrence, leaving a predominance of the medium voices — the mezzo-soprano in women and the baritone in men. This tendency has been particularly marked since the latter end of the 19th century, and in some places has had adverse effects, a dearth of true contraltos and high tenors having upset the balance of choral forces. It is interesting to speculate on what the result may be for the standard vocal repertory, in opera and oratorio, if it continues. (The virtual disappearance of the male alto has eliminated a vast repertory of vocal part music which required that voice.)

The programs of the two singers are agreeably diversified. Mr. Farrow turns to the 17th and 18th centuries, from Purcell through Bach and Handel to Haydn; while Mr. Rubes gives the first performance of a work by the Toronto composer Paul McIntyre — Amor Triumphans.

Distant Listener

• I would be interested in subscribing to the CBC Times if we would be able to receive it in time to be of use to us. Our mail comes in once a week—Wednesday, and unless it is sent from Winnipeg by Friday of the previous week we would not receive it on time. How far in advance are the copies mailed? In order to receive a copy of the "Times" for the week of September 27-October 3 it would have to leave Winnipeg on the train Friday, September 18. Otherwise it would be a half week late. If it is possible for me to receive the copies in time to be of use for the full week please enter my name on your subscriber's list. If not please let me know.—Mrs. D. S., Nelson House, Manitoba.

We are publishing this letter in the hope that it will serve as an answer to a question we are often asked: "Why do you send out the Times so far in advance? Sometimes it gets mislaid before I need it." Of all our subscribers none need—or appreciate—the "Times" more than those living in the remote northern areas of Canada, who receive no newspapers. To them CBC radio is their main — indeed almost their only—means of contact with the rest of the world.

velopment — the tendency of the higher and deeper voices to diminish in the frequency of their occurrence, leaving a predominance of the medium voices — the mezzo-soprano in women and the baritone in men. This tendency has been particularly marked since the latter end of the 19th century, and in some places has had adverse effects, a dearth of true contraltos and high tenors having upset the balance of choral forces. It is interesting to speculate on what the result may be for the standard vocal repertory, in opera and oratorio, if it continues. (The virtual disappearance of the male alto has eliminated a vast repertory of vocal part music which required that voice.)

The programs of the two singers are agreeably diversified. Mr. Farrow turns to the 17th and 18th centuries, from Purcell through Bach and Handel to Haydn; while Mr. Rubes gives the first performance of a work by the Toronto composer Paul McIntyre — Amor Triumphans.

About the nature or content of Mr. McIntyre's song I have no information, nor, at the moment of writing, do I know what else Mr. Rubes is to sing. But I would hazard a guess that, of the two singers, he has set himself the hardest task, modern songs (like most other modern music) not being exactly notorious for the ease with which they can be rendered.

By the same token, his accompanist, Mario Bernardi, is likely to find the going somewhat tougher than when he plays Purcell, Bach and Haydn with Mr. Farrow. Despite the fact that about seven-eighths of the musical texture and substance of a song are in the accompaniment, the accompanist is almost inevitably the minor partner in song performance, in the eyes of the public; and even with the much greater public knowledge and understanding of such matters that obtains today, it is doubtful if the generality of music lovers really appreciates how important and onerous his job is. It has been ranked, with justice, next to conducting, in the exacting nature of its requirements, and the calibre of musicianship for which it calls. That Mr. Bernardi is fully equal to all demands is attested by the number of times his name appears in programs.

Immediately after his stint with baritone Bernard Diamant, in a recital heard only in eastern Canada, pianist John Newmark, surely one of our busiest musicians, will be heard again, in the Sunday Morning Chamber Concert, as a member of the Montreal Piano Quintet, playing works by Handel, Gluck, Loeillet, and the contemporary British composer Edmund Rubbra.

On Sunday afternoon in the Winnipeg Sunday Concert, Eric Wild conducts a performance of Haydn's celebrated Farewell Symphony, in the last movement of which the players leave one by one (a hint to the princely employer of the first players that they needed a holiday)—an effect that would be better appreciated on TV than on radio. We can enjoy the delightful music for its own sake, however.

Particular interest attaches to the organ recital on Wednesday night by the French organist André Marchal, in view of his recent appearance in Toronto in the golden jubilee convention of the Royal Canadian College of Organists. Apart from Bach's D Minor Toccata and Fugue, his program is an all-French one—Clerambault, Daquin, Franck and Gigout. Also on Wednesday night there will be a concert of contemporary music from Vancouver, in which will be heard compositions by the British composers Iain Hamilton and Racine Fricker, the German Hans Werner Hentze, and the Canadian Robert Fleming.

Following Sam Pollock's "News from Home," Colin Wills, journalist, and radio and television commentator, visits the Shetland Islands in the most northerly part of Britain. All these islands—and there are about 100 of them—are isolated, and life there can be quite hard. To get to anyone of them you must go by boat, and it's not surprising that one of the main occupations of the islands is fishing—particularly for herrings—but there is also farming, and it is from here that the fine Shetland wool comes.

A Clutch of Chapeaux. Women's hats are usually considered a source of amusement, a target for snide comments, and fair game for any wit. Today, Norman Gridgeman turns the tales with some barbed comments about the headgear worn by men. Mr. Gridgeman is an Ottawa broadcaster who has contributed other Matinee talks.

Conversation with an Editor. Winnie Gascon is a journalist, formerly with the London Times and now editor of a trade paper published by a British firm in British Guiana. Her husband is a well-known cricketer. Mrs. Gascon holidayed in Toronto earlier this year and was interviewed by Monica Mugan, freelance broadcaster, writer and television personality.

So You're Elected. Winnipeg's Jessica Coulter has been president of the Volunteer Bureau and of Logan Neighborhood House, honorary president of the Winnipeg Council of Women, and has held office in the Canadian Authors' Association, the Manitoba Urban Association, the Beta Sigma Phi, the Winnipeg Flood Relief fund and the European Flood Relief fund. She was also Winnipeg's first lady during her husband's term of office as mayor from 1948-52. Mrs. Coulter draws upon her wealth of experience with women's organizations to talk about the role of the president in Matinee's series "So You're Elected."

Algernon Swinburne, settled in Merritt, B.C., "a small place within spitting distance of Kamloops." There were two children . . . first a daughter now married to a chicken farmer on Vancouver Island, and in 1926—John, who was a small, bright-eyed three-year-old when the family decided to pull up stakes and move to England. The world of poetry with its vivid images, its "talking on tiptoe" (George Meredith), opened up for him shortly afterwards, and by the age of seven he had begun scribbling in rhyme. In the next few years he became proficient in every verse form, writing about all the subjects that attract a small boy's curiosity: people and things, and later—ideas—He describes this period as "wonderful technical training." A few bits of verse appeared in school magazines, but mainly he wrote for himself and to read aloud to family and friends. He is a great believer in verse being heard—that is why he so enjoys writing and producing poetry for radio and recordings. . . . Hallmark pressed a record of his poetry in 1954, read by himself, Katherine Blake and Barry Morse. He has never gone after a publisher, but hastens to add that he would not say no if a publishing offer came his way.

He quit writing when he was 18, because "ever since the age of 15 I had been hot on trying to become a composer of serious music. I concentrated on it heavily for the next five years, took lessons in composition, lived and breathed music. Then at 23 I woke up to the fact that I hadn't written anything worth performing. I was a better critic than a composer, and the results weren't worth the heartache." Getting back to writing mitigated the pain of realizing he had wasted five years that could have been practice in this field, which he was confident he could handle. "My parents were open-minded and generous about my choice, and glad to see me doing what I wanted."

Meanwhile he had gone through Cambridge University on a choral scholarship, which he says parallels the athletic scholarships offered in North American colleges. A few English universities have cathedral status in English church music, but St. John's, instead of hiring lay clerks for its choir, as the cathedrals do, offers choral scholarships. Reeves sang ténor for three years at St. John's. Later he almost ruined his voice by choral conducting in Vancouver, "shouting out all parts from soprano to bass for those who couldn't read them well enough."

After graduating in classics in 1948 he disappeared into the whirlpool of National Service, and when next heard from was driving a truck in the Service Corps. Later he transferred to special duty in Intelligence. Visiting Cambridge on leave he strolled by the bulletin board at St. John's and noticed that a teacher at the University of British Columbia wanted to exchange for a year or two with a Cambridge man capable of teaching classics. The offer would expire the next day. Reeves whipped in his application at once and got the job. The only fly in the ointment was the British Army; he

UNIVERSITY TALK

This week—The first of three talks by M. H. Scargill, professor of Eng-
(Please turn to page 27)

WHETHER you're a bull or a bear in the stock market, on the management or bottom level in labour or business, or involved only indirectly with the vast machinery that keeps this big country ticking, you are ultimately affected by the ups and downs in Canadian economic affairs. And understanding the "whys" of business and labour developments is made easier by Business Barometer, a lively half-hour series on CBC radio Tuesday nights. Each week it reviews current major concerns of management and labour, and discusses developments in the vast fields of industry, trade and economics generally.

There are two regular services, a roundup of the week's business and labour news, and a report on activity in the stock, bond and money markets. The news is prepared in the CBC Toronto newsroom, and the market report is compiled by Frank Herbert of the CBC, in co-operation with the Toronto Stock Exchange and the Investment Dealers Association of Canada. Special features and short reports on matters of current interest make up the balance of the program. Regular attention is paid to activities of various groups such as the Canadian Manufacturers Association, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the Canadian Labour Congress, and senior officers of all these and many other organizations give their views on the program from time to time.

Besides reflecting business trends in all parts of Canada, Business Barometer offers reports and features from other parts of the world, such as London, Washington and New York, when events there reflect on economic activity in this country. Recent special features have included a study of the St. Lawrence Seaway, a close look at the future of uranium mining and refining in Canada, and a survey of the market for small cars.

Changes and developments in government fiscal and monetary policy are carefully assessed by economists and other experts from universities and the financial world. They make a special effort to explain these complex subjects in terms easily understood by the average listener.

Because Business Barometer concentrates on week-to-week happenings in the wide field it covers, not many programs can be forecast far in advance, says program organizer Reeves Haggan. This is also one of the program's strengths. It has been receiving a lot of favourable attention lately for its concise, up-to-the-minute reporting, made possible by the number of alert, highly-trained reporters Haggan can call on for fast roundup jobs. Among them are Clark Davey, Ottawa correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail; Norman DePoe of the CBC-TV newsroom; Clive Baxter of the Financial Post; John Meyer, financial editor of the Montreal Gazette; Wilf List, labour reporter for the Globe and Mail; Knowlton Nash, Canadian freelancer in Washington; Doug Collins of the Vancouver Sun, and H. A. Hampson, Toronto research economist.

Nothing that affects the economic life of the country is overlooked by Business Barometer. Many regular listeners report that they find the series a painless, highly interesting course in economics.

Foot in the Door. June Sheppard is an Edmonton housewife and frequently opens her kitchen door to house-to-house salesmen. They usually introduce themselves, though, as "survey takers" and their sales technique wouldn't sell Mrs. Sheppard a glass of cold water on a sun-baked desert. In fact, she's beginning to consider all salesmen intruders upon her privacy.

Women of the Coast. Isolated Canadian communities don't usually possess many of the amenities of civilization. Barbara Greene was therefore very surprised when the flimsy shack by the wharf at Whaletown, B.C., turned out to be filled with books. It was the community's lending library. The 50 Whaletown inhabitants give the library a flourishing business, too, Barbara discovered. Miss Greene is a freelance broadcaster who has been travelling about the coast of British Columbia gathering reports for Matinee.

At Home with the Ancients. A Queen who spins, a King who orders out a mule cart, a Princess who makes a picnic out of washday. That was Homer's picture of domestic life among the ancient Greeks. And that is George Woodcock's subject in the first of his series of talks about home life in ancient civilizations. Mr. Woodcock lives in Vancouver. He is editor of the new University of British Columbia Quarterly, "Canadian Literature," and is the author of several books, three on travel, biographies of Godwin and of Aphra Behn and a book by Oscar Wilde. Mr. Woodcock is currently working on a book about the French novel and has contributed other series to Trans-Canada Matinee.

I think the idea that you're tremendously powerful because you have newspapers is grossly exaggerated. I think that it's the prime responsibility of newspapers to present to the public honest and fair news, to give them the facts, and under our system of democracy, the people make up their own minds. I don't think you fool people very much, and I don't think that strong propaganda really has that effect. Give them the facts, let them make up their minds, and in the final analysis, that's the best thing for democracy, and for our country, and for that matter, for the world.—Canadian newspaper-owner Roy Thomson, on BBC.

still had about nine months to serve. He discovered that compassionate grounds offered the only loophole for an early release. It was Canada's good fortune that the Army board looking into his problem was a sentimental one. Reeves pointed out to them that he was Canadian-born and really did not know what he was doing in the British Army, but more important, that his father was Canadian-born, and although he had long wanted to retire to Canada, his pension could not be taken out of England. Hating to see his elderly father pining for home, he felt it his duty to take his parents to Canada and support them there. Before long he was on a boat headed for Montreal, and fortunately nobody from the Crown was on the dock to note that he was travelling alone!

"I enjoyed the people and the beautiful campus at UBC," he recalls. "They asked me to stay on when my year was up, but I realized I wasn't a born teacher." To keep himself alive he freelanced as a choral conductor, did a few broadcast talks for the CBC, and became an expert humbug spinner in a candy factory. Though Cambridge had hardly equipped him for the humbug field, he seems to have enjoyed it—his eyes flash with amusement as he describes in detail how he yanked and shoved the candy into the required consistency and shape for cutting—"rather like a taffy pull." Although he lists sleep as one of his favourite pastimes, he got little of it then — worked a full shift and rehearsed a choral group far into the night. "That was when I first grew a beard—not having to shave saved a whole ten minutes in the morning!" Why does he wear it now? With an engaging grin he admits that it is "pure vanity." I like myself in it."

He gave up humbogs to "chase a woman all the way from Vancouver to Europe." Dashing through Toronto he applied for the first available opening in the CBC's new producer-training program. He liked the brief tastes he had had of broadcasting in Vancouver. After nearly three months in Italy, France and Britain he ran out of money and spent a month as a monkey-keeper in the London zoo to earn his passage back to Canada. He arrived in Toronto jobless with $9 in his pocket, and went round to the labour exchange to enquire about openings for candy-makers, but no one seemed dying for a humbug spinner so he spent the night in a flophouse considering his future. It looked grim until the "bum" next to him suggested he apply for work with a construction outfit. He was signed on next day.

A few weeks later — September, 1952—he became a trainee producer for the CBC, and was promoted to full producer the following year. Since then he has been the guiding hand behind a wide variety of musical programs, including Songs of My People, Appointment with Agostini, Dixieland Jazz, and the first concerts and recitals from the Stratford Music Festival, as well as many of the CBC's major drama productions—CBC Wednesday Night features, the popular summer series Four's Company, and others. One of his favourites was a 1955 effort called Focus . . . "a producer's dream: 85 minutes every Saturday night with no station breaks, and all the freedom in the world to create something distinctive in drama, music or talks."

He divides all his programs into two categories—chores, and interesting jobs into which he can put something of himself, such as CBC Wednesday Night productions. He conscientiously studies each script before going into rehearsal and makes up his mind what should be done with it. Unlike some producers he believes in letting his cast go over the script beforehand. He has a little chat with them, and insists that the first read-through should not be slipshod. Each performer is encouraged to interpret his part as he conceives it right from the start, so Reeves

At the U.N. Saturday, October 24, is United Nations day—the day when all the countries, member-states of the United Nations, hold community observations acknowledging the work of that world body. Matinee's UN reporter, New York Times correspondent Kathleen Teltsch, reports on UN day observations at its headquarters in Manhattan.

The Chinese Family Today. In her first two Matinee reports on family life in present-day China, Marjorie McEnaney discussed the Chinese woman and Chinese children. Today, she talks about the role of older people in the Chinese community—how their needs are taken care of, their participation in society, their position in the family group. Mrs. McEnaney visited China this summer and made a special study for Matinee of life in that country.

can tell whether they're contributing to his overall feeling for the production.

"I'm always prepared to adjust my ideas," he says, "but we can't have a soloist sticking out like a sore thumb. Most performers at their peak turn in about 75 per cent of what you'd like to hear. Of course there are exceptions. John Drainie and Budd Knapp, for example, are extremely sensitive and articulate. You can count on 90 per cent from them. But sometimes you can turn a little switch in their minds—and then you get fireworks! It happened with Knapp when he played poet John Donne in a Focus production in 1955. That night he turned in 150 per cent!"

Reeves says he used to like producing drama and music shows equally well, but now he is 70 per cent in favor of drama, providing the scripts are really good. He dismisses much of his own writing as unimportant, but he is justifiably proud of A Beach of Strangers. His winning of the Italia Prize was announced Monday, September 14, but Reeves was notified confidentially on the Thursday before. He flew to Sorrento on Saturday, and stayed in a colourful old hotel high on the lip of the Mediterranean, where many illustrious men of letters have stayed and left their subtle auras behind them . . . Goethe, Browning, etc. . . . and where you descend to the indescribably blue water in a frightening little elevator that descends slowly through solid rock. All the eight prize-winners (six firsts, two seconds) were on hand for the awards presentation, one having flown from Australia. "But," says Reeves, "Thank God I didn't have to make a speech!" Normally the prize money (15,500 Swiss francs) would be divided between the script's author and its producer. Since Reeves was both, he is now some $3,410 richer. He returned via England, where he visited with his parents, who were "very excited and proud."

In London he was disappointed to learn that his friend, BBC writer-producer Douglas Cleverdon was away on holiday. Cleverdon has been one of the most important artists in the Italia competition for several years, and a great inspiration to Reeves, who, when he felt he had reached a dead end in 1956, went to London and studied with him. Now, in the peace of the late night hours, Reeves is at work on a 1,500-line philosophical poem, Autumn Nocturne, designed for reading and broadcasting. Jimmie James, who has read the first half, describes it as "extremely beautiful." Probably it will be presented soon on CBC radio.

And as CBC Times goes to press he is beginning the libretto for an exciting new venture—a jazz opera, in collaboration with composer Norman Symonds (also bearded). The setting is San Francisco, and the conflict is between the attitudes to life of seafarer and landman. Composer and writer met a few months ago when Reeves produced The Age of Anxiety, a jazz setting of W. G. Auden's poems, for which Symonds wrote the score. Each was greatly impressed by the other: Reeves by Symonds' depth of feeling as a composer and his insistence that jazz and serious music are not inseparable, and Symonds by Reeves' understanding that a jazz text need not be primitive and earthy, but can be sensitive, imaginative and thoughtful. In venturing into the relatively untouched field of jazz opera they have few letters of precedent to bind them and the results of their collaboration are eagerly anticipated.

As his future opens wide for him, Reeves says his philosophy of life is: live for the present. He could not be happier in his choice of career.

His only complaint about anything is that modern apartments do not come equipped with gas stoves. He loves cooking steaks, and cannot get the results he wants with electricity. Omelettes are another of his specialties. He believes that nothing should go into them but farm-fresh eggs. The flavouring should be provided in a side-dish or in the fat used to cook them—he prefers goose-grease. Where on earth can you find goose grease? His eyebrows shoot up in surprise at such a mundane question. "Why, get a goose and cook it, of course," He has other cooking theories, many of them unconventional—which he will expound at the drop of a crumb. But if you are interested, do not go round before noon. He sleeps late.
